Technology has changed the way people learn and communicate. Students can access online courses, digital libraries, and educational videos from anywhere. It helps them understand difficult concepts more easily and complete assignments efficiently. Teachers can also use technology to create interactive lessons and monitor student progress. However, excessive use of smartphones and social media may reduce concentration and affect academic performance. Therefore, students should use technology wisely and maintain a balance between online learning and other activities. When used responsibly, technology becomes a powerful tool that improves knowledge, creativity, communication skills, and overall personal development.
